LAW OF THE LAND

Two Revolting Trials—Our Federal System—Duty of Every American to the Flag.

New York, June 12.—In three weeks this Nation will celebrate the anniversary of the birth of the Republic. The men who met in the old court house in the City of Philadelphia on the Fourth of July, 1776, pledged their lives, their properties and their sacred honors that they would support and maintain the Declaration of Independence there made, and when the old court house bell rang out a joyous peal that proclaimed "Liberty throughout the land and to all the inhabitants thereof" they thought they were creating a system, the wisest and the best the government of man ever conceived since creation's dawn and that would last till the crack of doom. Eight years of bitter and relentless war followed; homes were wrecked, fortunes were scattered to the winds; sons fought with fathers and brothers with brothers. Peace came at last when both parties, having destroyed all that could be destroyed, sank down exhausted on the battlefield, leaving behind the deadly aftermath of war in poverty and suffering untold.

There were thirteen separate Colonies, loaded with debt which they had no means of paying; with no army, no navy, no judiciary to administer the civil and criminal courts, and no settled system for the collection of revenue for the support of the government. Each of these Colonies desired to be an independent Republic, free from interference of any of its associates. It did not take long to demonstrate that such a condition of business association was impossible, and that on the first sign of danger the weaker party was certain to go to the wall. The formation of a stronger fraternal bond became an overwhelming necessity and in 1781 the Federal Constitution was perfected and, with several important amendments, has been the supreme law of the land ever since. Our federal system affords the citizen the greatest protection in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness. It has been our boast, when comparing our government with that of any other Nation that now exists or ever has existed in the past, that we surpassed them all, and there is no better time than the present to see how far that claim is justified.

With an army and navy, with a judiciary and police system supposed to be in good working order, there now are two trials going on revealing the most revolting and atrocious system of cold-blooded assassination that has ever cursed our criminal calendar. In Idaho a member of one of the principal bodies of mining-strikers—Haywood—is on trial for the murder of Governor Steunenberg, and Harry Orchard, one of the most desperate thugs in the villainous association, has been accepted as state's evidence. No more terrible story than that told by him was ever heard in a court of justice; counting the men he killed in blowing up mines, with those dispatched by private assassination, his victims could not have been far short of fifty. He killed sixteen strikers in the blowing up of a single mine. Harry Orchard was a model thug—he killed for money, for not one of those he killed had ever injured him; a number of those he did not even know by sight and a man had to be sent along to point out the victim. With all that preparation he killed the wrong man; the Miner's Secret Service did not pay when he killed the wrong man. Again, in as well organized a state as Kentucky, a judge of one of her courts has boasted that he has had thirty-three of his own enemies put to death without ever raising a hand himself; a hundred dollars seemed to be the usual price for an assassination. These assassins were well known, their regular business was murder; sometimes as an amusement they took shelter by working as miners but, when the removal of some one was desired, the person who wished his neighbor put out of the way only had to hand one hundred dollars to Harry Orchard and his enemy was removed with neatness and dispatch and no questions asked. In the mountainous districts of Kentucky, where these trials are now going on, it was almost impossible to get a jury. If a juror failed to acquit an assassin or disagreed with the other eleven, his life was the penalty of his rashness, and not only his own life but that of every member of his family was marked, sooner or later, for the death roll, which was executed with the dread certainty of fate.

In view of the terrible happenings which are reported every day, is it not a duty which every American owes to the land that gave him birth to rally around the flag, which is the symbol of our nationality and the defender of our Constitution, and swear, by the memory of the Patriots who founded it, that anarchy and treason shall no longer have a voice in our government? We have suffered enough; we have given away too much; we have parted with our public lands, and there is now nothing more to give except that costly and precious jewel—the freeman's ballot—which we are now bartering away.

PETER ALBERT CORLEY

Old Soldier Meets With Accident Which Proves Fatal.

Peter Albert Corley, a highly esteemed citizen of West End, met death in a most tragic manner about noon on Monday, June 10. He had sold some cattle and was returning home after delivering them when the young horse which he was riding became unruly and threw him to the ground. The shoe, striking Mr. Corley on the head, fractured his skull. The accident occurred within sight of his home and, although unconscious, he lived about thirty minutes. Funeral services were to have been held Wednesday afternoon but owing to some of the deceased's children not being able to reach home, the funeral was postponed until Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. A large congregation was present to witness the sad rites, which were conducted by Rev. C. W. Warlick of Mann's Choice. Interment was made at Trinity church on Dry Ridge.

Mr. Corley was born July 23, 1842, and was, at the time of his death, 64 years, 10 months and 17 days of age. He enlisted in Co. H, 55th Regiment, U. S. Vol., on February 29, 1864, and was honorably discharged at Richmond on June 4, 1865; was in several decisive battles, receiving a wound in the right arm. Mr. Corley is survived by his widow and ten children: A daughter, Mrs. John Kegg, died less than a year ago.

Mrs. Sarah Clabough

Mrs. Sarah Clabough, a daughter of Baltzer and Sarah Mills Fletcher, was born in Monroe township, this county, February 19, 1847, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Una Dorrior, in Buck Valley, Fulton county, on June 3, at the age of 60 years, three months and 20 days. On February 17, 1870, she was united in marriage with J. Thomas Clabough, who died about eight years ago. She leaves the following children: Mrs. Una Dorrior, at whose home she passed away; Herman and Fletcher, of Monroe township; Frank of Calle, O.; George of Walkersburg, Cleveland of Marcus, Ia.; Chauncey of Cumberland and Homer and Ira, at home. Also the following brothers and sisters residing in this county: Bernard, Baltzer and Francis Fletcher, of Monroe township; Mrs. Barbara Weimer of Clearville and Mrs. David Price or near Everett.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Mt. Pleasant Lutheran church, conducted by Rev. J. Milton Snyder. Interment in the cemetery adjoining the church. Six sons bore the body of their mother to her last resting place. Deceased was widely and well known and will be greatly missed.

Miss Emma Berkheimer

Emma Samantha, daughter of the late Amos and Elizabeth Berkheimer, died at St. Clairsville on June 3, of stomach trouble. She was born near that town on June 21, 1854, being, at the time of her death, 52 years, 11 months and 12 days of age. She was the third in this family to answer the final summons within the past seven months, her mother and brother having preceded her to the world beyond. She leaves the following brothers and sisters: Alonza of Shelby, O.; Mrs. Mary Houston of Altoona; Mrs. Matilda Grindel of St. Clairsville and Agnes and Elmira, at home.

Funeral services were held in Trinity Reformed church, St. Clairsville, on last Thursday, conducted by Rev. J. W. Zehring, assisted by Rev. J. H. Diehl. Miss Berkheimer was a faithful and active member of the church, having been a teacher in the Sunday school for thirty years. She was loved by all and will be greatly missed in the community, the church and the home.

William H. Weyant

Union, Edward, Mrs. Annie Jekes and Mrs. Laura Walker, of Weyant. Funeral services were held at Imber on Monday, conducted by Rev. J. H. Diehl, assisted by Rev. J. H. Zinn.

PLEASANT SURPRISE PARTY

James Heltzel of Cessna Passes Seventy-Second Milestone.

A surprise party was given Saturday, June 8, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Heltzel of this place, in honor of their father, James Heltzel. Mr. Heltzel had been intentionally taken away from home in the morning and upon returning was greatly surprised to see buggies and wagons in the yard and the house full of old friends and acquaintances who had come to greet him on his seventy-second birthday. After congratulations there was no time lost by the good ladies in getting refreshments for the occasion as there was an abundance on hand and soon the large table in the dining-room was fairly stacked with substantial as well as dainties, to which all present did ample justice. Grandpa received some useful presents, one being a great plug of which he is very fond. The day was spent in pleasant chats as all were glad to have the opportunity to meet on an occasion like that, returning home with a regret that birthdays don't occur more frequently.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Our Regular Correspondent

PRESIDENTIAL BOOM

Worked Up by Corporate Interests—Democrats Will Revise Tariff and Exterminate Trusts.

Washington, D. C., June 12.—William Jennings Bryan was in Washington last week and gave an interview tending to correct some inaccuracies that he said had crept into the talk that he gave out in New York. He says that he did not say, as attributed to him, that there were more important issues than the tariff before the people. What he said was that there were three issues before the people: the trusts, the railroads and the tariff and that they were of equal importance. There were other issues, he said, but these three were paramount. He said he did not think it necessary to give supreme importance to any one of the three issues named. The Democratic party, he said, was determined on all of them—thorough revision of the tariff, extermination of the trusts and strict regulation of the railroads. He did not say, it was noted, government ownership of the railroads. Colonel Bryan has come to the conclusion that he is too nearly alone in his government ownership theory to attempt to make it a part of the creed of the Democratic party, but he knows that strict supervision and control of the railroads is a thing on which all members of the party are agreed.

As to the possibility of President Roosevelt nominating his successor in office, Mr. Bryan said that it was hardly a necessary or laudable proceeding. He said a candidate with a clear record needed no sponsor.

Senator Knox's Candidacy

Speaking of candidates, there is a good deal of quiet amusement among the politicians in Washington, and a good many of them are still here, over the solemnly modest way in which Senator Knox received the endorsement of the Pennsylvania convention on the launching of his presidential boom. Senator Knox is a good man in a great many ways and is personally well liked in Washington, but it is thoroughly understood among practical politicians that his boom is being worked up by corporate interests as a stalking horse in the fight that the managers of the Republican party are afraid to make openly against any man of President Roosevelt's choice. Senator Knox was the successor of Mat Quay, probably the most brazenly machine-made politician of machine-ridden Pennsylvania. Boies Penrose had the practical appointment of a man to succeed Quay and was hesitating between several possible candidates when H. C. Frick and President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania Railroad walked into his office and said that they wanted Knox appointed. There was not a moment's hesitation. Knox was given the place and rumor has it that the place cost somebody $250,000 that went where it would do the most good. Now if Knox should ever be elected President and have a trust fight on his hands, it is hardly likely that the trust would get the worst of it.

Diplomats Held Up

The little flurry over the holding up of two or three diplomats in automobiles near Washington on the Conduit Road far exceeding the speed laws has grown till it is becoming quite a respectable sized issue. The holdups referred to were the work of the mayor and the sheriff of Glen Echo, a little hamlet on the outskirts of Washington. The town is just outside the District line and is so small that one would hardly know it was there if it were not for the sheriff with his bicycle and speedometer with which he runs down and convicts offending motorists. The members of the Diplomatic Corps are much in the habit of using the road and as it is a fine road, kept in repair by the War Department, there is every temptation to let out the machines and do a little speeding. There was a great deal of talk in the papers over stopping the diplomats because a diplomat is under treaty protection and exempt from arrest no matter what he does. One would think that under the circumstances they would be particularly careful about not violating police ordinances; but they are not and they have complained bitterly to the State Department about being stopped on the Conduit Road. Now the mayor and sheriff of the little town have become incensed at the persistent violation of the local laws and they say that though they can not arrest a diplomat, there is no law against stopping him and warning him about the law. This is just what the diplomats object to—they say it is humiliating. But Sheriff Collins says there is nothing to distinguish an ambassador or a minister from anybody else under the bear-skin coat and a pair of goggles, so he proposes to stop every foreign envoy and make him establish his identity or else carry a flag or some other distinguishing mark on his machine. The whole corps diplomatique declares it is an outrage. But the State Department says it cannot do anything about it and up to date it looks as though the mayor and the sheriff had scored.

HANG OUT THE FLAG!

Remember the Glorious History in Which It Figured.

Today is Flag Day—the anniversary of the formal adoption of the Stars and Stripes, as the emblem of the United States, by the Continental Congress on June 14, 1777. Before Betsy Ross made the first national emblem more than fifty flags had been conceived, used and discarded. "A glorious emblem, with its bars of white, pure as the driven snow; its stripes of red, glowing like the healthful blood of a youthful nation, and the constellation of stars flashing the triumphs of the states above the azure of the universe."

She's up there—Old Glory—where lightning's are sped; She dazzles the nations with ripples of red; And she'll wave for us living or droop for us dead—

The flag of our country forever.

She's up there—Old Glory—no tyrant-dealt scars, No blur on her brightness, no stain on her stars. The brave blood of heroes hath crimsoned her bars. She's the flag of our country forever.

—Frank L. Stanton.

AROUND THE WORLD

Turks a Type of Physical Manhood—
Views Tomb of Alexander the Great at Stamboul.

The Aegean sea is dotted with islands so thickly on the map, that they appear to be only stepping stones between Europe and Asia, but from the deck of a steamer in their midst the perspective widens and in the absence of continents from the physical vision, they are more like jewels in the azure brooch of the Mediterranean—rising in the shadowy blue, passing in the golden sunlight and fading in the dreamy haze. And each single pearl in the cluster sparkles with charming legend or lustrous historic fact—Melos, where the Venus de Milo was found; Paros with its quarries of the world's best marble; Chios, one of the seven birthplaces of Homer; Denos, the cradle of Apollo; Patmos, where the Apostle John during his banishment saw the vision of the Apocalypse and wrote his wonderful Revelation, and others.

Threading these gems of the sea the Arabic, with unerring instinct, wound her sinuous course from the shore of classic Greece to the gateway of the Dardanelles and along the surface of this peerless lapis lazuli, past the plains of ancient Troy to the capital of the Ottoman empire. All night long and the day before we had been going north, and when in early morning we entered the famous straits it was in the face of a blizzard that bristled and snarled at us as a watch dog on the southern outposts of Islam. The liquid surface of the channel through which we glided was waved and grained into a fascinating negligence like a maiden's flowing tresses. On either side the mountains sat shoulder to shoulder, their laps full of forts and the forts full of batteries, their ranks unbroken except where once they retired that the waters might spread into the round blue sea of Marmora, and then again they crowded close together that they might guard the crystal approach to the great Moslem metropolis.

The Turk is so suspicious and so cowardly that he searches every vessel that enters his territory. Before leaving New York we were forced to obtain passports at $2 each as a guarantee that we would not attempt to kidnap the Sultan or elope with his harem. This wicked little instrument was a description of our persons, with a detail of the size and undulations of the nose, color of the eyes and hair, the convolutions of the ear, height, weight, race, color and mental condition, all sworn to by a notary, signed by the Secretary of State and endorsed by the Turkish minister at Washington. Our steamer had to halt at the entrance to the Dardanelles and undergo inspection by officials with red fezzes and unmentionable breeches, and at Constantinople no sooner had our anchor grappled the mud of the harbor than a force of guards came aboard and took possession of our passports—quite a lot of red tape and nonsense.

A great city lay before us—a city of pinnacled minarets and domes, of towering business houses coming from over the hills down to the water's edge, where they seemed to stop and brace themselves with effort to keep from sliding into the water—a city of a swarming million and more, a city sanguine with the blood of warring religions and yet beautiful in its physical setting of hills and waters; the spot of all the earth most favored by nature for a destiny. The harbor was alive with craft of all kinds, from the row boat to the ocean liner, and there was an air of business and prosperity that impressed us favorably and threatened to reverse, in a measure, our preconceived notions of the place.

Suddenly some one caught sight of an American flag and ripped out a lusty yell. It was flying from a boat that carried the American consul and was headed in our direction, and then a chorus of cheers for the red, white and blue rolled up from the decks of the Arabic and were repeated by the hills. In distant lands there is nothing that gives the traveler more pleasure than the sight of his national flag, for it is the symbol of the home and native land that he loves and an assurance of protection, a consoling parental guardianship that is backed by army and navy and millions of men. We did not fear ill treatment at the hands of the "Sick Man of Europe" but personally, when, after 30 days in foreign ports without the sight of anything American, I saw the stars and stripes fluttering from the mast of a coursing boat, the thought that my country stood ready, if any indignity should be offered to one even so humble as I, to sacrifice every life within its great domain for redress or protection, and when a similar thought possessed the entire six hundred of our ship and they exploded in a paroxysm of cheers, I confess I went into a delirium of irresponsible action.

God bless the American flag—I never knew what the old muslin rag meant before—and speed the day when it will take a million bales of Texas cotton a year and a million pounds of Ohio wool to decorate the tops of American ships in the ports of the world!

It was nearly night when the Turkish officers concluded the inspection of our passports and only a few of us ventured into the city. We lay in the harbor and read from guide books the interesting history of Constantinople. Of Byzantium, the first city founded by the Greeks 700 years B. C.; how Constantine came with the "In hoc signo vinces" of a new Rome and the Christian religion; of the building of a great city and its adornment with the riches and treasures of the decaying civilizations of the East, of Justinian and his famous Pandects; of Chrysostom, the silver-tongued expounder of the gospel; of the matchless Hippodrome and its fetes and its riots; of St. Sophia the peerless church; of the vicissitudes of the empire, its fights against the hordes of the western woods that pounded its fortifications so long in vain; its brave struggle against the invincible Arabs and its final, pathetic, and awful fall; its desecration for half a thousand years by the Mohammedans; of the queer customs of this strange people and their religion and government—and

Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-wheat bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man, if physicians can but find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this ingenious and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No griping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

"ALL DEALERS"

with the recollection of this history brooding like a nightmare over our pillows, we abided the coming of the day and its visual revelations.

During the night the Unseen Hand, the same that through the centuries has guided the destinies of men and nations in a way past mortal understanding and yet for the best, threw a mantle of pure white over the city to hide its patent deformities, and in the morning, through the showering flakes, it appeared as charming and chaste as a virgin in her veil. Wrapped and with overcoats buttoned to our chins, we set foot upon the pier.

A throng of Turks, of the unspeakable variety and of the vintage of the twelfth century, red topped and with that incomprehensible surplus of baggy cloth pendant and swinging from the seats of their trousers, the grimy, heavy-muscled laborers of the docks stopped and gazed curiously at us, the infidels of the West, as we landed and fought our way through the inevitable postcard vendors. Yes, even in Constantinople the postcard agitator measures his insanity with the insanity of the western tourist—the accident crazy to buy, the orient crazy to sell; it is a universal epidemic. Up to this time the Arabic passenger list is out $3,275 for the item of postcards alone; but it is a harmless sort of insanity that cures itself through a drainage that ensues in the region of the pocket.

We were not surprised at the sloppy condition of the water front for such places are liable to be dirty and foul in any city, especially in a snowstorm, but we expected better of the streets and were astounded when we drove through them and found that they were vile and filthy in the superlative degree. The accumulated rubbish from everywhere, dumped by common consent and long custom into the street, there to decompose and befoul the air, is the sight that met us at the threshold of Constantinople. The management of our cruise, with splendid forethought, had provided every necessary thing for our comfort, except clothespins for the nose, in Constantinople I have looked in my book of synonyms under the head of "offensive," "foul," "vile," "horrible" and similar terms to find a word to fitly describe this carnival of odors, but they are all too mild. There is but one comprehensive, terse and violent description—it is Turkish.

And what better place in all the world, not only for Turks but for an asylum for dogs. Here the dog has found his heaven; he is respected far above the foreigner who invades the city, is all but sacred as long as he lives and is sainted when he shuffles off his coil. And frankly, if I were a Turk I, too, would revere the dog next to my Mohammed and pray that he might be fruitful and multiply, for in the absence of a street cleaning system, he is the only barrier between the people and pestilence. As we drove through the streets—and an oriental street is always a narrow odoriferous canyon—the driver picked his way carefully through the herds of dogs lest he should injure one and incur the displeasure of Allah. Most of them were curled up in groups on the little sidewalks, others were moping about without any effort to avoid the traffic; the remarkable thing was the way traffic gave the lazy, stuffed beasts a courteous right-of-way.

Please do not get the idea that these were ordinary dogs or that their appearance or disposition on the streets is anything short of the extraordinary. They occupy the entire city, forty-odd thousand of them, and are so distributed that no locality is congested, and the supply does not exceed the demand. They operate with system, dividing the city between them, and woe to the canine that strays into quarters not his own, for he is promptly set upon and killed by his kind unless he be swift enough to escape. This is a law that prevails among them and is said to be strictly enforced. I studied these animals carefully and came to the conclusion that they were wolves that had come down from the plains of Russia. They are covered with a thick coat of yellow wool and have a bushy tail, sharp nose and small eyes. They doze during the day and howl all the night long; it is the howl and trait of the wolf and not of the dog. An American who lives in Constantinople was annoyed by a specially vicious dog in his vicinity and in the midst of his vexation he shot at the animal. A furious mob of Turks surrounded him at once and he was arrested by officers and thrown into jail on account of "carrying arms with malicious intent to murder a dog" against the peace of the city. It is a grave misdemeanor to kill a dog, with a maximum penalty of three years' imprisonment; to kill one or step on his tail carries with it the act of an immediate punishment that one who tries it does not soon forget. In all the world there is not another such sight as the dogs of Constantinople.

The city that was so charming from the ship was repulsive from the carriage and as we slowly moved along the crooked lanes of slush and refuse we were thoroughly disillusioned. On every side were the oriental streets of stain, with the ascending and descending throngs of people, and everywhere groups of sleeping or drowsy dogs. The current of humanity was like a river of red, as far as the eye could reach—a vista of bobbing cushion fezzes; the larger current, where we cautiously pushed our way, as reinforced by catarracts of humanity that tumbled into it from the steep side streets. I think the fez is the neatest and most attractive headpiece worn by any nationality of men and I bought a half dozen for the purpose of trying to have them adopted in America.

I am also of the opinion that the Turks are the most able-bodied specimen of physical manhood to be found on the globe. Ah, but they are fine-looking fellows, brawny limbs, broad shoulders and tall, powerful forms. As a rule they have a bad eye, but it is no wonder that such a multitude of muscle overran the effete minions of Constantine even behind the battlements of granite. It is a nation of giants and, properly led and properly trained, they can whip any other country in a rough and tumble fist-fight. The wonder of it is how such an upholstery of physical strength and stature can be attained in such a foul environment. See those big-boned fellows, how they are bending under the great burdens on their backs. Notice that one particularly—there must be 400 pounds of heavy boxed freight on his back; how the ligaments of his brown face stand out like cable strands of iron; how firmly he plants his foot on the muddy pavement; who is he, guide? A porter, we are informed—the freight and package delivery system of the city. There are no express wagons or moving vans, just backs and muscles of men.

Every now and then we passed a fountain where persons were filling vessels—usually empty Rockefeller oil cans—or drinking from cups, and there seemed to be some one officiating in the distribution of water. We learned that the city was full of these fountains, most of them built by the municipality, but many of them erected by private capital and actually endowed. At these latter an attendant

COMMON SENSE

Leads most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition. Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily growing in favor. The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody. Dr. Pierce being desirous of having the search light of investigation turned fully upon his formulae, being confident that the better the composition of these medicines is known the more will their great curative merits be recognized. Being wholly made of the active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs. Examine the formula on their bottle wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and lung-coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption. Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get its full benefits. The ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed have the unqualified endorsement of scores of medical leaders—better than any amount of lay, or non-professional testimonials. They are not given away to be experimented with but are sold by all dealers in medicines at reasonable prices.

ant is paid to serve the liquid free to all comers and keep things in repair. One of the precepts of Mohammed deserves to be specially commended and in that precept is found the solution to the health of the people and the secret of their superb physiques. He inveighs against the drinking of intoxicants as a sin against Allah, and it is one of the astonishing proofs of the restraining force of their religion that one hundred eighty millions of Mohammedans have faithfully obeyed that law 1,300 years. Say what you will about the Turk but give him credit for the finest example of sobriety among the races of men, and let the followers of the lowly Nazarene hang their heads in shame. They drink water, thousands of gallons flush their interior anatomies every day and not a drop, at least not many drops, of distilled poison go down their throats. It is a pity more of it is not applied to their bodies on the outside and I did wish for a few thousand feet of hose with which to flush the execrable streets.

Constantinople is divided by a deep, narrow arm of the Bosphorus called the Golden Horn. On the northern side is a section called Galata, where there are as many Europeans as natives, and Pera which is strictly European; on the southern side the old city of Stamboul, which is Turkish to the core. The long bridge connecting the two divisions is the main throbbing artery of the metropolis, where two currents of humanity sweep past each other from dawn till dark. I drove across in a blinding snow storm and later in the day sought it out again on foot for a study of the complex life of the peoples. It is a draw-bridge and at stated times is lifted to permit the passage of ships. It is also a toll-bridge and must yield the government a marvelous harvest of coin.

In the quiet waters on either side there were forests of masts and ships' rigging, skimming row-boats and red-hatted men bending to the oars. On the bridge a continuous rumble of wheels and a clatter of horses' hoofs, a veritable Bosphorus of agitated fezzes, a cyclorama of startling costumes, a masquerade of sects and classes and nations—the aristocrat in braid and gilded display, the tattooed beggar in his animated wrap of rags, the pompous soldier, the woman spook with her face in eclipse, the Jew, the Greek, the Arab, the gaping tourist, the native porter bending under his burdens, the toll-takers—the whole composing a stirring and amazing potpourri of color and condition that is unsurpassed anywhere, unless it be in Cairo, of whose mixed population we hear so much.

In Stamboul the buildings are low and the citizens unprogressive, and but for a tram car that made semi-occasional trips along the twisted streets we could easily have imagined that we were in the dawn following the midnight of the dark ages. This car was pulled by horses and was preceded by a herald on foot who blew a horn, such as children get on Christmas trees in America, to clear the way. As the main street was only about fifteen feet wide there was a constant glut of humanity and vehicles and progress was made slowly. In this section mosques are numerous and the devout citizenship have mounted their homes and shops with low domes in imitation of their churches. After an hour of slow driving, innumerable stops and incessant "hiyi" from our driver, we drew up at museum where we tramped through room after room of treasured antiquities and crippled and mutilated statues; but nothing we saw worthy of record in a brief sketch such as this except the marble sarcophagus of Alexander the Great and the skeletons of his wife and family, inglorious relics of the splendid royalty of forty-five centuries ago. And I might make a hasty note of the tear jug in which the ancients shed their mechanical grief at funerals, and the numerous tablets of clay books dug from the site of Nineveh of old, which were on display.

But Constantinople is so full of interest that another letter is necessary for even a bare mention of its strange features. The mosque of St. Sophia, the great bazaars, the queer modes of life in the homes of the Mohammedans, their religious services, the Sultan and his government, a ride up the Bosphorus to the Black sea, and other things will be given in the next communication. SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

INTERNAL PARASITES.

Cooper's New Discovery has taught me many things. Not least of which is that parasites or tape worms as they are called are responsible for an immense amount of suffering. Thousands of these creatures have been brought to me by people who have taken the New Discovery and now know that an immense amount of supposed stomach trouble is caused in reality by one of these parasites. A man or woman may be afflicted in this manner for years and not realize the true cause of their suffering. When I first sold Cooper's New Discovery I did not know that the medicine would remove this trouble. I have since found that it invariably does so. The following letter is a fair sample of the symptoms as experienced by an individual thus affected:

NICK EMMERICK.

"I was always tired. My stomach bloated and the slightest exertion made me sick, weak and dizzy. My appetite was variable and a good nights sleep was unknown to me. When I awoke in the mornings I had a bad taste in my mouth and a coated tongue. I heard of the wonderful benefits that were being derived from Cooper's New Discovery, and decided to try it."

"The horrible tape worm, sixty feet long that had been sapping my life away, passed from my system alive and squirming after I had taken three doses. Now I have a splendid appetite, every trace of stomach trouble has disappeared and my digestion is good. I sleep well and am gaining in strength every day." GROOMING COUNTS

But it cannot make a Fair Skin or a Glossy Coat.

Women with good complexions cannot be homely. Creams, lotions, washes and powders cannot make a fair skin. Every horseman knows that the satin coat of his thoroughbred comes from the animal's "all-right" condition. Let the horse get "off his feed" and his coat turns dull. Curying, brushing and rubbing will give him a clean coat, but cannot produce the coveted smoothness and gloss of the horse's skin, which is his complexion. The ladies will see the point.

Lane's Family Medicine

FOR INHERITANCE TAX

President Roosevelt, in a recent speech at the Jamestown Exposition, again declared himself in favor of federal control of large fortunes. He believes rather in an inheritance than an income tax, the basic principle of both of which is the same, but seems to doubt whether either an inheritance or an income tax can be so framed as to run the gauntlet of the Supreme Court.

The wisdom of such a law as is recommended by the President is not seriously questioned by those who have expressed themselves upon the subject through the public press, nor is its justice, for they seem to find ample reason for making the exaction of a part either of a large income or of a similar inheritance on the ground of the protection furnished by the federal government to the body and property of the wealthy one while he is amassing his fortune and enjoying it.

The protection of the federal government is proportional, unquestionably, as the individual has much or little, and justice would suggest that the one receiving the greater amount of protection should bear a corresponding amount of the burden of taxation.

The repeated references to such a tax by the President tend to keep it before the public mind and it is not unlikely that a bill will be presented at the next Congress, but while it would be likely to pass and receive executive approval the "ways" of the court have to be reckoned with. It does not require an exceptional memory to recall the time when such a law was declared unconstitutional by the court after it had been declared constitutional and after one of the judges had changed his mind.

Following are some of the President's comments:

In my judgment the inheritance tax is both a far better method of taxation, and far more important for the purpose of having the swollen fortunes of the country bear in proportion to their size a constantly increasing burden of taxation.

These fortunes exist solely because of the protection given the owners by the public. They are a constant source of care and anxiety to the public, and it is eminently just that they should be forced to pay heavily for the protection given them.

It is elementary that the nation has the absolute right to decide as to the terms upon which any man shall receive a bequest or devise from another. We have repeatedly placed such laws on our own statute books, and they have repeatedly been declared constitutional by the courts.

I believe that the tax should contain the progressive principle. The principle of this progressive taxation of inheritances has not only been authoritatively recognized by the legislation of Congress, but it is now unequivocally adopted in the leading civilized nations of the world—in, for instance, Great Britain, France and Germany.

I do not believe that any advantage comes either to the country as a whole or to the individuals inheriting the money by permitting the transmission in their entirety of such enormous fortunes as have been accumulated in America. The tax could be made to bear more heavily upon persons residing out of the country than upon those residing within it.

Our prices are right. If you want printing of quality, give us a trial.

CAPITOL PROBE GOES ON

Important Evidence Secured—Bills Signed by Governor.

Harrisburg, June 12.—The Capitol Investigating Committee is continuing its probing into the business methods of the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings with the result that some one—and one but many—will go to prison as a consequence of the graft employed to land contracts and inferior workmanship and materials used after the contracts were landed. The Committee has subpoenaed a large number of banks throughout the state, with whom many contractors and subcontractors had accounts, to come before the investigators and show, if possible, what was done with the vast sums of money paid to these contractors. It is hoped that at least a few banks have kept a record of this disposal so that it can be proved that a portion of the money eventually found its way into the pockets of some one "higher up."

There has been much discussion about the value of the evidence already in hand, some of which has been made public during the hearings and some of which has not gotten beyond the committee and its counsel. However, repeated assurances are given that swift justice is to be meted out to those who have shared in the looting of the Treasury through the $9,000,000 capitol graft contracts. It is authoritatively stated that the preliminary papers for the criminal suits are already drawn and before the investigating committee completes its reports arrests will be made. Legal steps for restitution of the ill-gotten gains will follow shortly. It is known that Mr. Scarsell, expert counsel for the state, is to assist Attorney General Todd in the prosecutions.

Considerable interest was created in the reports of the expert metallurgists who were employed to make an analysis of the bronze lighting fixtures. All of the different reports were essentially the same; they reported that there was a lack of the proper proportion of both copper and tin. In no case were there found the 87 per cent. copper and 13 per cent tin as per the specifications furnished to the contractors by the state. This bronze work cost the state $2,000,000 but it cost the manufacturer $275,000 to make it.

Governor Stuart has been kept busy since the Legislature adjourned signing the various bills passed by the Senate and House of Representatives. Among the bills he has approved are the Railroad Commission bill, which provides that hereafter all common carrier corporations in this state will be under the supervision of a Railroad Commission. While the bill does not give the Commission power to go after the companies' rates, yet it has power to recommend that the Attorney General take action. The Commissioners are to be appointed by the Governor for terms of three years each, the salary to be $8,000 a year.

Authorizing the Banking Commission to increase the force of bank examiners from fifteen to twenty. Requiring water, gas or electric light companies, before entering upon or occupying a street or highway in a township of the first class, shall make application to the local authorities and obtain their consent.

Making it lawful to sell Belgian hares from October 1 to April 15. Providing for a Shade Tree commission of three freeholders in each city, borough, and first-class township who shall have control of all shade trees therein. Prohibiting the use of automatic guns in hunting game, animals or birds.

Making it lawful for school boards to fix not less than two periods of not less than one week each during which beginners may enter school. "Beginners," under the act, means any child of school age who cannot read and write.

Providing for the acquiring by municipalities of water plants and systems from private owners. The Governor has yet several hundred bills to dispose of, exclusive of the appropriations.

LITERATURE

In this column will be published weekly one or more selections of poetry or prose, selected from many sources and from best authors.

"There's never a rose in all the world,
But makes some green spray sweeter;
There's never a wind in all the sky,
But makes some bird's wingfeather.
There's never a star but brings to heaven,
Some silver radiance tender,
And never a rosy cloud but helps
To crown the sunset splendor.
No robin but may thrill some heart,
His songful gladness voicing.
God gives us all some small, sweet way
To set the world rejoicing."

ARE YOU NEEDED?

Have you made yourself important?
Are you needed in your place?
You complain that you are slighted;
Gloom has settled on your face;
Younger men are passing onward to rewards you cannot claim,
And you cry that luck betrays you,
but is luck alone to blame?

Others blessed with little talent have been pushed ahead, you say,
But their services are needed and they give the best they may.
Would the world care if tomorrow
you sat on some distant star?
Have you made yourself important—
are you needed where you are?

THE MUGWUMP TARIFF GIRL

(Boston Transcript)
I talked of things of interest,
The facts of every day—
Of fashion, church, the newest song,
The opera, the play.

With languid interest she heard—
I mumbled much and long,
She stopped me in my talk to ask,
"Had I read the tariff bill?"

I said that Carmencita danced
Like aspen on the wind;
She asked me what the duty was
On plush coats, satin-lined.

I spoke then of Mac Queary's book,
And was he orthodox?
She said it was a shame to charge
Such tax on woolen socks.

I praised the coloring she had made,
The etchings she had drawn.
She urged the tax on frames and sighs
Beneath her bosom's lawn.

I eyed the swaying chandeliers,
She caught my roving eye,
And whispered, "Were the tariff low,
The glass combine would die."

The floor of marble she explained,
Sweetly as was her wont,
Was taxed to a man who owned
A quarry in Vermont.

In leaving, something on the stoop
Impeded my descent;
She said it was an English rug
Taxed eighty-five per cent.

ST. THOMAS' CATHOLIC CHURCH

New Bell Added to the Handsome Edifice.

The rescoing of St. Thomas' Catholic church is now complete and has a very fine effect. The ceiling is formed into panels, four on each side and four directly overhead—all surrounded by mouldings painted in light and shade; the panels in the centre have emblems painted thereon, all surrounded by neat tracery and enriched with gold. The prevailing tint of the panels directly overhead is a pale cobalt blue; the prevailing tint of the side panels is pale cream surrounded by bands of olive and gold. At the top of the side walls there is a very rich border formed by Gothic arches resting on small round columns with rich capitals and bases and has a very rich and pleasing effect.

Around the windows are painted mouldings in light and shade, enriched with neat tracery and resting on columns, giving to the windows a fine architectural effect. Over the wainscoting is a very pleasing border of scroll work. The prevailing tint of the wall is a pale, warm olive tone. The ceiling of the sanctuary is shaded to represent gold damask. In the centre, directly over the main altar, a pure white dove is painted, surrounded by a halo of golden rays. The vestibule and vestry are tinted and lined in harmony with the main audience room. All the woodwork has been varnished. The three altars have been re-decorated in white and gold. The statues have also been re-finished.

All the colors are in perfect harmony, light and cheerful, and have a very pleasing effect. New Stations of the Cross is also relieved with Gothic frames are to be furnished. The figures of these stations are worked up in polished ivory tone, with the sky a natural blue, the frames to imitate polished composition metal. There are fourteen Stations of the Cross, seven in each side, which will add quite a decorative feature to the church. The entire work was executed by the firm of William B. Whitaker, Boston, of established reputation, and adds much beauty to the interior of the building. Special services will be held on Sunday.

EYE-SIGHT SPECIALIST

DR. J. N. HELMAN

of the Mahaffey Optical Co. of Pittsburg, will be at the Bedford House, Bedford, Pa., 2 Days Only, Friday and Saturday, June 21 and 22,

Giving Free Examinations of Eyes.

Headaches overcome by their wonderful system. Prices from $2 to $8. All lenses guaranteed for two years. No one urged to buy, and all will be treated courteously whether an order is given or not.

WE DO NOT PEDDLE

This makes the fifth visit to Bedford. We make regular trips here every two months and have fitted hundreds of people in that time. All lenses are guaranteed for two years and any change or re-correction needed within that time is made free of charge. Our permanent office is 803 Schmidt Bldg., 339 Fifth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa. If you cannot call during our regular visit here, we would be glad to see you at our city office.

How We Do Business

This firm carries on a perfectly legitimate optical business, giving full value for every penny received. Examinations are absolutely free: If you require glasses we tell you so, give the price and you are at liberty to purchase or not. We do not urge you. There is no other reliable firm of eye sight specialists making regular visits to Bedford county that do what we do, guarantee all lenses fitted for two years and make any change free of charge within that time. There is no expense, after you purchase a pair of glasses, for at least two years. We use only the finest grade of crystal lenses and have all corrections ground according to the prescription. We do not give you something near what you require, but exactly what your case calls for. No drops or drugs used.

When You Require Glasses

If you suffer often with headaches, either sick or nervous.
If your eyes tire easily while reading, sewing or doing close work.
When they feel like there is sand in them, or burn or smart.

When the letters blur or run together in reading.

If you squint or frown to see more distinctly.

If you hold reading matter very close or far away.

The above are a few of the more easily recognized symptoms of the eye strain. Nothing is gained by neglect. They should be looked after at the first sign of trouble.

Your Child's Eyesight Cured

You are responsible for your child's eyesight. Watch out for frowns, squints, or to see if the eyes ever cross or if, in reading or looking at a picture book, he holds too near or too far away. These defects grow faster than the child and in all cases can be overcome if you bring your child to us in time. We especially invite you to bring your children in. You may save a lifetime of weak eyes. Defects in the eye never disappear of their own accord. It is free. We don't charge you for advising.

Would you rather suffer with headaches, nervousness, and other conditions caused by eye strain, than wear glasses? It must be one or the other, for 98 per cent. of headaches, both sick and nervous, come from overtaxation of the eye muscles and the only relief is glasses. Of course they must be right. Any peddler who comes to your door can sell you a pair of glasses, but not once in a thousand times are they what you require. Besides, those who peddle only come around once, and you rarely see them again; all they want is your money, for they have no reputation to sustain.

BEDFORD IN YE OLDEN TIME

Complete Text of Two Lectures Delivered by

DR. CHARLES N. HICKOK

In the Court House at Bedford, February 23 and March 19, 1886, and Printed in Full in the Bedford Gazette.

Mr. Dallas, of Philadelphia—the father of the late vice president, George M. Dallas—who had been Secretary of the Commonwealth during Governor Mifflin's administration, had purchased a tract of land in Bedford county, of which the high mountain point known as Mt. Dallas, was a part. As we all know, this mountain is in near view from the Hartley homestead and is a conspicuous figure in a very charming landscape. In those days such an investment was not, however, with all its æsthetic advantages considered a sharp business transaction. Mr. Dallas having never seen his land, took a notion, some years after its purchase, to look at it, and accordingly rode on horseback from Philadelphia for that purpose and arrived at Hartley's one evening after nightfall. He did not make himself known, but Mrs. Simpson, who had seen him in earlier years, knew him at once, but gave no sign of recognition. Mr. Dallas had a magisterial, stately mannerism that amounted almost to ostentation. He was opinionated and, though really a great man, and so regarded, his evident self-consciousness sometimes proved annoying. He was just the party that Mrs. Simpson—as Dame Partington would have expressed it—"held in utter exorcism." But to my story. The morning after his arrival Mr. Dallas walked out, before breakfast, upon the front porch, and observing an elderly lady standing there looking out over the landscape, he commenced a conversation with her, asking her question after question in that patronizing style so offensive to well bred people. Finally he added "the last straw that broke the camel's back" and exhausted the old lady's patience. In affected ignorance he asked, "can you tell me, madam, the name of that beautiful mountain knob across the river, and to whom it belongs?" "Yes," she replied, with apparent innocence, "that property was bought some years ago by an old idiot in Philadelphia, who has more money than brains and it is named after him, Mt. Dallas." She continued gazing serenely over the beautiful valley and mountain, while Mr. Dallas went in to his breakfast, which he no doubt enjoyed. The reminiscences of all the earlier inhabitants, their characteristics and peculiarities, as I have heard them, would make a volume. We must be contented with a few. I am just here reminded that in my first lecture I made a mistake. I spoke of Gen. John Piper of Yellow Creek Valley, the member of the Constitutional Convention of 1790, as a "remarkable athlete." It was his son, Gen. William Piper, who was the member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1818, and performed the athletic feat spoken of, and many others as wonderful. Incorporated in this narrative will also be mention of some houses that we have overlooked in their legitimate places.

Hon. Alexander Thomson, successor of Judge James Riddle, father of Frank Thomson of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and uncle of the late Vice President Hendricks, studied law here in 1814-15 with Samuel Riddle, Esq., builder of the Riddle mansion, now the Barton House. He—Thomson—afterward, while in legal practice here built the brick house on Penn street, now the property of the Misses Watson. Judge Thomson's career as a lawyer, a Congressman and jurist, was an illustrious one. He was just as the blind goddess at whose altar he ministered; conscientious to the last degree; and, withal, so pitiful and kind that his sorest trial was to pronounce sentence upon the guilty. He was a God-fearing, God-loving man. I knew him well. In my boyhood it was my good fortune to be in his Sunday school class for two years in Chambersburg. He is mentioned by Rev. Dr. Sample in his "Historical Sketch," as one of the active members of the early Presbyterian church in Bedford. His first wife, Abby Irvine, lies in the old south graveyard. His second wife was Jane, daughter of General Graham of Stoyestown, Somerset county. Speaking of Samuel Riddle's house reminds me that I omitted to mention how it was supplied with water. William Krichbaum, who was born in 1768, and died in 1863, was a famous maker of pumps and wooden water pipes. He bored and laid the pine logs that conducted the water from the spring that supplies the Anderson farm house, this side the stone mill, north through Juliana street to the court house corner, and thence to Riddle's at Penn and Richard. These were the first water-works.

Krichbaum afterward made and laid the pipe from the Gravel Hill reservoir. Once these pipes became obstructed and, for a time, no ingenuity could discover the cause. Finally, after much patient digging, Krichbaum found the obstruction at Larry Harmon's corner, where was recently built the gymnasium. Larry Harmon was a noted blacksmith in his day, and while peaceable generally and an orderly citizen, he was a dangerous man to trifle with. He could strike a blow with his fist that would fell an ox, and more than one professional bully on the yearly muster day, has come to grief by picking a quarrel with Larry Harmon.

If I had the time I would like to describe to the young people the "muster or training days," now obsolete. The theme would furnish volumes of amusement. The boys now-a-days don't know what fun is, as compared to that which their sires and grandsires enjoyed.

The stop in the pipes we spoke of occurred in this way. The fibrous root of a locust tree had found its way through a small worm hole, into the bore of the log pipe, and grew and spread there, fed by the running water, until like the fabled camel that with great apparent humility and modesty, thrust its nose into a tailor shop, it did not take long for this root to fill the entire pipe and make the flow of water impossible, and yet old Father Krichbaum in 1854, when the first iron pipes were laid indignantly pronounced "these new fangled tings nix goot." Krichbaum, when ninety-two years of age, could, by his own strength and skill, lift the heavy pump stocks in sections out of the deepest wells in town, many of which are now covered over under the pavements and elsewhere. Even after his ninetieth year he would start with his huge log-chain and other implements of his trade on his shoulder, and walk long distances into the country to adjust some disorderly pump, and considered it a matter of course. While he was never known, as the phrase is, "to be in liquor," for he was a steady, orderly, industrious citizen, the liquor was always in him. He habitually took his three drinks of whiskey a day, and he attributed his great strength, all his long life of 95 years, to this "goot creatur," that was "poth meat and trink." Shall we score one for John Barleycorn?

There was in Bedford at an early day the firm of McDermot & Dunlop. They dealt in iron and also carried on general blacksmithing. Mr. McDermot afterward kept the Caledonia House at the Black Spring, one-mile south of the Bedford Springs, since gone to decay. Here was born his daughter, who afterward became the wife of David R. Porter, Governor of Pennsylvania from 1838 to 1845. She was the mother of Gen. Horace Porter, whose name has been so much associated with that of General Grant, on his staff and as private secretary at the White House. Mrs. Porter was a lovely character, esteemed for her excellent sense, as well as for her gentle, unostentatious piety.

In the same Caledonia House were born, about sixty years ago, twin sons of the then proprietor, Mr. Appleton, both of whom are now distinguished ministers, in Philadelphia, of the Episcopal church. Judge Jonathan Walker built a two-story log house that stood until the late William Shuck removed it, where Dexter White's restaurant now stands. Robert J. Walker, his son, who became Secretary of the Treasury under President Pierce, United States Senator from Mississippi, and Governor of the territory of Kansas under President Buchanan, was born here. Judge Walker subsequently built the east end, first and second stories of what is the Union Hotel, and here Robert J. was brought up. Judge Walker was six feet four inches in height. His wife was Miss Duncan of Carlisle.

Where is now Thomas Lynch's house stood until about 1840 a long one-story frame building. It was used for law and other offices. One of them was occupied by Jacob Fletcher, Justice of the Peace. I mentioned him in my last as an inveterate fisherman, and, in the earlier part of this paper, as a member of the old Masonic lodge. He was a somewhat eccentric character; jovial, good-natured, could "upset" his men at a boxing match and was altogether a quaint specimen of the genus homo. He had but one expletive—"Dem my old shoes!" Excuse me, ladies, the orthography of the word is d-e-m. I mention it to illustrate, in my old hero, the force of habit. In his latter years Squire Fletcher became a religious and, everybody believed, a good man. Of course he still went fishing; so did Simon Peter; but we never read that Simon Peter, while waiting for a nibble, would say "Dem my old shoes, why don't you bite?" The poor old Squire, in his abstraction and second childhood, sometimes did just this; and when recalled to himself by the sound of his own voice, or if told of it by some urchin who perchance overheard his words, he would weep for very sorrow. Who shall say his tears were not as effective as were those of Simon Peter in obliterating his sin?

John Lyon, Esq., the brother of Mrs. James M. Russell and nephew of Mrs. Anderson, wife of the "Rolling Tom" we spoke of in our last lecture, was a prominent lawyer here in the early part of this century. He died in 1814, and is buried beside his aunt and her husband.

Dr. John Hofius, father of the late David H. Hofius, one of the most brilliant young lawyers at the Bedford bar, forty years ago, lies in the Reformed churchyard. He was a Prussian by birth and education. He came to Bedford at an early day. He built the house now owned by Mrs. Harry, and had in it a drug store. He was postmaster for several years. He was a gentleman of the "old school," courteous, formal and punctilious in matters of etiquette. He was notably particular, not only as to the properties of speech and behavior toward his general acquaintances, but was especially scrupulous that no word or act of his should be a bad example to his children.

The postage system in his time was not as it is now. There were no stamps, and the postage could be paid by either the sender or the receiver. If prepaid, the letters were so marked; if not, the receiver paid the amount stamped on them. Moreover the rates were much higher than now and were in proportion to the number of sheets and the distance sent. One day a man inquired at the office for a letter. The doctor looked and found one for him, "postage twenty-five cents, unpaid." The man demurred at the price and asked if something less would not answer. The doctor explained that the price was fixed by the government and that he was responsible to the department for just the amount on the letter, and he could take no less. In those days the prices did not range in fives and tens, as now, but were graded, "six and a quarter; twelve and a half; twenty-five; thirty-one and a quarter cents," and so on; or what was the same as "fifs, levies, quarters, etc." After annoying the doctor for a considerable time, the man went out. Soon he returned and offered a "levy," just half price for the letter. The doctor's patience was sorely tried, but his decorous habit enabled him, rather curtly however, to say "no!" The man again went out without the letter, but soon returned. In the meantime the doctor's three boys had returned from school, and, with several other persons, were standing in the office. The letter dealer went up to the delivery window and said, "I tell you now what I'll do, I'll give you a levy and a fip for that letter and I won't give you another cent." The doctor's temper was instantly at boiling heat, and he fairly screamed out, in his broken English, "Chon! Tave! Pill! quick, run te schtore out, vile your daddy schwear!" and before the boys could get near the door, he let loose such an avalanche of German invectives as proved his early education in belles lettres had not been neglected.

Among the men of marked individuality belonging to the early periods within the scope of my lecture, were Dr. John Anderson and Dr. William Watson, the eldest. You know there were three Doctors William Watson, father, son and grandson. Dr. Anderson commenced practice in the last century. His field of practice reached some sixty miles either way but chiefly to the west and north. He was obliged to make his professional visits on horseback; to go armed for fear of Indians and wild beasts; and oftentimes he was obliged to carry a lighted fagot or a lantern, as a protection against the wolves. He relinquished medicine at an early day and turned his attention to his large landed estates. He was also at one time Prothonotary of the county and was president of the Allegheny Bank of Bedford. He was bodily a man of large size. He was public spirited, charitable and influential. Dr. Watson came to Bedford in 1805 I think, and was celebrated far and near as a physician. It was a common occurrence for parties to come from the extreme southern states to the Springs, to be under his treatment. He was almost a giant in physique, being six feet four inches in height, and weighing three hundred and forty pounds. He was, notwithstanding his weight, active, spending much of his time on horseback and was said to be one of the lightest dancers among the habitués at the Springs. The father of James G. Blaine was a student of his, as also was Dr. Francis B. Barclay, who was contemporaneous with a later period, but who died before the days of the present generation. Dr. Barclay was no less distinguished as a physician, and especially as a surgeon, than his preceptor. Dr. Barclay often concealed a sympathetic heart under a brusque demeanor, especially when performing some intricate surgical operation, but it was only a mask to hide his own feelings of pity. He was a great reader of history and was also an extensive and appreciative reader of the poets and of standard romance. The works of Sir Walter Scott, both prose and verse, and of Tom Moore had special charms for him. He had a wonderful memory. The "Lay of the Last Minstrel" and "Lallah Rookh" he could repeat by the hour. He was one of my first Bedford friends, and he was a friend; entertaining and instructive in conversation, and true as steel in action: too manly to flatter; too proud to say behind one's back what he felt a duty to say to one's face. I knew him but a few years. He died soon after I came here, but not too soon for me to warmly esteem him and to give me a life-long pleasure in having known such a man as Francis B. Barclay.

Another old citizen who passed away at a ripe old age some sixty years ago is worthy of mention. It was Mr. Reimund the father of Solomon and Henry Reimund, deceased, and of our townsman, George Reimund. His business was the making of spinning wheels and, ninety years ago he had his hands full, for then the wheel was a necessity in almost every household. I wonder what the old man, if he could revisit the scenes of his active life, would think of the æsthetic craze that makes his handiwork the prized ornament in the parlors of many who don't know the difference between a spinning wheel and a wheel barrow. Father Reimund, as he was called, was a quiet unobtrusive, good old man, whom everybody respected. Partly contemporaneous with Mr. Reimund, but of a later period, was William Stahl who came here from Bavaria in 1820, and carried on cabinet making and undertaking for more than forty years. Like Father Reimund, he was a man of simple honesty and modest piety. For many years it was not considered orthodox for anyone within a reasonable radius of Bedford to be laid in any other coffin than that of "Pap" Stahl's make. He was a good singer in his day and the country people would almost as soon have dispensed with the parson's services at a funeral as to have foregone the quaint psalmody of "Father" Stahl. The only member of Mr. Stahl's family still living with us is Mrs. Peter H. Shires. Mr. Stahl was an officer in the old-time German Reformed church, as Father Reimund was in the Lutheran, and they were such without guile or reproach.

Hon. David Mann was appointed Prothonotary in 1809, by Governor Snyder and re-appointed by Governor Findlay, serving twelve years. He was State Senator in 1821, and Auditor General under Governor Shultz from 1824 to 1827. He was over eighty years of age when he died. Hon. Job Mann, nephew and brother-in-law of the above, was Prothonotary twelve years, State Treasurer of Pennsylvania and member of Congress.

THE HEART CAN'T STAND RHEUMATIC ACID POISONING

To Free and Correct the Blood a
Uric-O Treatment is Advised

There is great danger in those sharp, shooting pains through the chest around the region of the heart. It means that poisonous uric and rheumatic acid are there ready to spring and grip tightly the muscles controlling the heart's action. Don't neglect these warnings, they are the danger signals Nature flashes to you for help. You must neutralize and drive these dangerous poisons from the system, or sooner or later they will overcome you.

The only true way to cure Rheumatism is to get at it from the inside with Uric-O. It acts with marvelous swiftness upon the muscles, kidneys and blood. Clears out the sand-like deposits in the muscles, forces the kidneys to perform those duties for which they were designed and neutralizes the acid within the blood.

Your physician will admit that this is the only true way to cure Rheumatism permanently, and should know that Uric-O is the one remedy that will do it successfully and permanently. Uric-O is a liquid taken internally, it is not a pill, and does not contain any morphia, opium or other so-called "pain deadeners." It is good for Rheumatism in any form. Sciatica, Muscular, Inflammatory and Articular Rheumatism all yield readily to Uric-O. Write the makers of the remedy and they can tell you of many wonderful cures that Uric-O has made right here in your own town.

It sells for 75c and $1.00 the bottle free by writing to The Smith Drug Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

Uric-O is sold and personally recommended in Bedford by F. W. Jordan.

OLD SOLDIERS' CITY

Visited by Our Townsman, M. P. Heckerman.

Fitzgerald, Ga., June 9, 1907. I wrote you from this city (village then) about twelve years ago. I then had to come here by team part of the way from Tifton, Ga. It was here that I watched a chopper cut down a big pine, followed it to the sawmill, saw it cut into boards and saw these same boards go toward making a house, all between sunrise and sunset. Then it was called the "Old Soldiers' City" and had a dozen shacks for those to live in; now it is a neat, clean city of twelve thousand, with four banks and a number of other public places for you to see.

There are many elegant stores and two of the best hotels, the last one finished was opened in January. It is called The Lee-Grant and is a dandy; rates from $2.50 to $6 per three meals and a place to sleep. The windows are all screened and a canopy over the bed to keep out the "tarnal" mosquitoes. These are only half the size of the Jersey mosquitoes, hence the fineness of the wire in the screens and the netting over the bed is likewise as fine as cheese-cloth. Now imagine, if you will, Dad trying to sleep, on a night with the mercury dancing up in the eighties with all these protections against the little singers. Well, I pulled down the netting and shoved my No. 8 through the screen, all by accident, however, but I got some hot air and went to sleep singing "think of your head in the morning," and I did, for mine looked as if I had a bad dose of measles.

The land is so sandy hereabouts that every hill of grain must be strongly fertilized in order to get any returns at all. The corn is planted one way, a grain to a hill and these four feet apart one way and five feet the other. Now thirty bushels of ears is a very large crop to an acre here. The oats is all cut and has been sold loose in the straw for one dollar per hundred; this is then baled and sold over again in the bales. I have not seen any wheat for weeks. The corn, what there is of it, looks well, is in tassel and it tastes good. I had my first green corn and watermelon on June 3 at Macon—have had it several times since and with good Jersey butter tastes good. I have had peaches and a few evenings ago went out into a field and gathered a big lot of blackberries. Oh! such fine large and sweet ones—these I ate for supper, in fact all the passengers on the train did the same and we were in no hurry as the engine hauling our train lay on its side in the ditch.

I met Joe Carloe at Fitzgerald. He went there from Pennsylvania when the town started and is, today, one of its most influential and wealthy citizens. He and I had a long talk about Pennsylvania and he even, today, knows about as much of the various towns as the writer, as he used to live in Altoona, Johnstown, Somerset and other towns. He has a most interesting family and will be glad to meet any one from his old home. It did me good to have this talk with Joe. Long life to him and his.

The hot weather during the past week has pushed the cotton along at a rapid pace and the prospects are fine for a good crop, so that cotton goods won't be any higher than they are now. Next week I go to Brunswick, Ga., and into Florida, then I start back home to be there early in July. Please send me a paper to Gainesville, Ga. M. P. Heckerman.

At Anderson Park on Friday last the home team defeated St. Clairsville by a score of 11 to 5. The visitors were not able to connect with Diehl's curves and made but one earned run. Stambaugh of the visitors also landed on the ball for two two-base hits. The score follows:

nothing, to a set of ignorant farmers who usually sell it for a dollar. We welcome to our shores the German and all British subjects; the Dane, the Swede and the Norwegian always find a friendly welcome; the subjects of Japan always have a hearty greeting up to the full measure of treaty limits. The Fourth of July is only a few weeks off and there can be no better time to renew our oath of fealty to the Nation and join in the immortal apostrophe of Lincoln, pledging that "The government of the people, for the people and by the people" shall not perish from the face of the earth and also to renew the oath of Webster, "By the Eternal, the Union must and shall be preserved."

Last week when the celebration of the Protestant Sunday schools took place there were hundreds of children in line; it was a glorious sight to see such fine specimens of the human race, who are to be the fathers and mothers of the next generation. It is much to be regretted that the narrow-minded policy which has governed the Sunday school celebrations in Brooklyn for the last twenty years still prevails—a policy that excluded the children of Universalists and Unitarians. It was a disgraceful exhibition of narrow-minded bigotry of which they should be ashamed. I wonder if they ever read that Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

BROAD TOP COMMENCEMENT

Large Audience Grooms High School Graduates.

The Broad Top Township High School commencement was held in the M. E. church at Riddlesburg Tuesday night and was pronounced by all as a most enjoyable occasion. Most of the patrons of the vicinity look forward to the time when these exercises are held with great expectation, and so almost an hour before the time for beginning every available seat was occupied and standing room was at a premium.

The invocation was pronounced by Rev. J. Merrill Williams of Dickinson College. This was followed by an oration, "Non Perfecta sed Incepta" by Miss Mary E. Donelson; a reading, "Rights and Duties," by Miss Lulu Taylor; a reading, "The Burning Ship," by Miss Mollie Collins. All rendered their parts to perfection and reflected great credit to the young ladies.

The commencement address was made by Prof. J. Allen Myers of Juniata College. In his masterly and most eloquent manner he made an earnest plea for more thorough training and brought out forcibly the possibilities of our youth. In a pleasing, as well as impressive manner the president of the school board, William Lauder, presented the diplomas, after which Ex-Supt. Potts was called upon. The professor was equal to the occasion and in his own peculiar and forceful manner made some very fitting remarks. The music was furnished by the Huntingdon Orchestra which is directed by Prof. Potteiger. They played well last year but they did even better this year. The graduates are Misses Mollie Collins, Lulu Taylor, Mary Donelson and Ora McCabe.

After the exercises Mrs. L. B. Shaw gave a fine reception to the class and a number of friends. After spending an hour in partaking of refreshments and enjoying literary exercises the gay party dispersed thanking the hostess for the kindly courtesy and royal good time.

about graft and rake-off in the purchase of supplies for the Panama Canal and it appears now that the whole of buying is to be taken over by the Army, which will handle practically all the purchases for the work and the men. The purchases of machinery and material for the work are to be made by the chief of engineers, those of medicines by the surgeon general's office and those of commissary material through the commissary general's office. There is one thing to be said about the new scheme and that is that the officers in charge of these departments are about as nearly incorruptible as human beings can be and, there is not likely to be much more talk of graft.

President's Travelling Expenses
Accounts are being cast up at the end of the fiscal year and it is found that the expenses of the President for travelling have been almost ridiculously small. There was an appropriation of $25,000 made for this purpose by the last Congress and there was some talk about its not being large enough. The railroads which had been furnishing presidential special trains had been spending money like water and going to extravagant lengths. The President likes comfort but does not care about luxuries, and since he has been paying his way with government money he has cut everything down to very plain first-class accommodations. The result is that the total travelling expenditure comes inside of $8,000 and about two-thirds of the appropriation will be turned back into the Treasury.

For experience teaches that, as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so is a shoe no better than its poorest part. CHIEF ATTRACTION

Permanent Naval Display at Jamestown Exposition.

Norfolk, Va.—While not on so tremendous a scale as in the opening weeks, the naval display at Jamestown will nevertheless be maintained in an adequate manner throughout the entire period of the Exposition. The United States government has assigned three ships to duty right off the great pier during the seven months and these will be constantly open to the inspection of visitors. Considering that the most popular exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago was an imitation battle-ship built on piles in the lake, the reality of the Jamestown squadron will be of the greatest interest to strangers from the interior. But this is by no means the limit of naval representation; the harbor of Hampton Roads, being a naval rendezvous, is seldom without several war vessels lying at anchor and the ships of the United States navy are constantly arriving and leaving this harbor. The Navy Yard at Portsmouth and the great ship-building plant at Newport News are generally crowded with war craft under construction and undergoing repairs, so that no visitor need leave the section without having his curiosity fully satisfied concerning naval matters.

Some of the foreign fleets will not arrive until later in the summer and an effort will be made to have this government extend a further invitation to the different naval powers to make Hampton Roads a stopping place for their individual cruising vessels during the period of the Exposition. This is a frequent occurrence in ordinary times and with proper representations to the different governments could be made a feature.

This is to correct the impression that the dispersal of the present fleet signifies the ending of the naval display. At no time during the entire period of the Jamestown Exposition will there be less than twenty-five war ships on the nearby waters for the instruction and entertainment of visitors.

DON'T PUT IT OFF LONGER

Get Rid of That Indigestion at Once by Using Mi-o-na.

Many people in Bedford are slowly poisoning themselves by chronic indigestion. Their neglect to cure sluggishness of the important organs of digestion fills the system with fermenting and decaying food that result in sick headache, heartburn, bad taste in the mouth, and many other symptoms.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets are for the special relief of such sufferers. They quickly cure the worst cases of indigestion and when used a few days the pain and distress often felt after meals will disappear.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets cost but 50 cents a box and do more good than a dozen boxes of the ordinary digestive tablets. F. W. Jordan gives an absolute, unqualified guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na fails to cure. June 7-2t.

A prompt, pleasant, good remedy for coughs and colds, is Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. It is especially recommended for babies and children, but good for every member of the family. It contains no opiates and does not constipate. Contains honey and tar and tastes nearly as good as maple syrup. Children like it. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Pineules are for the Kidneys and Bladder. They bring quick relief to backache, rheumatism, lumbago, tired worn out feeling. They produce natural action of the kidneys in filtering waste matter out of the blood. 30 days treatment $1.00. Money refunded if Pineules are not satisfactory. Sold at Irvine's Drug Store.

A man who is in perfect health, so he can do an honest day's work when necessary, has much for which he should be thankful. Mr. L. C. Rodgers, of Branchton, Pa., writes that he was not only unable to work, but he couldn't stoop over to tie his own shoes. Six bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure made a new man of him. He says, "Success to Foley's Kidney Cure." Ed. D. Heckerman.

If you suffer from bloating, belching, sour stomach, indigestion or Dyspepsia, take a Rings Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal, and overcome the disagreeable trouble. It will improve the appetite, and aid digestion. Sold at Irvine's Drug Store.

A Lesson in Health

Healthy kidneys filter the impurities from the blood, and unless they do this good health is impossible. Foley's Kidney Cure makes sound kidneys and will positively cure all forms of kidney and bladder disease. It strengthens the whole system. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Horror of Needless Noises

It is the heedlessness of most noises that renders them insufferable. You sleep very well through the roar of a wintry storm, but if some one has forgotten to fasten a blind, and it begins to bang, then you are lost; you might as well get up and locate that blind and fasten it first as last. The manifold noises of your steamer's plunge through the night, with the perpetual wash of the sea, unite in a lullaby to which the worst conscience sinks into repose; but a snore breaking from the next stateroom recalls the memory of all one's sins. The rush and leap and incessant but varied grind and clang of the sleeping car become soothing at last, but a radiator, beginning to fizz and click after the steam has been turned off, seems to leave the would-be sleeper no resource but suicide; if you could get at the second engineer, and leave him weltering in his gore, you could snatch a few cat-naps before morning; but you can't get at the second engineer after midnight in most hotels. Continuous noises and necessary noises are things you can adjust senses or your spirits to; but the noise without a reason, without an apparent right, like the gnawing of a rat in the wainscot, is what drives so many to perdition; and the clatter of the power-dory will probably ere long fill the asylum from the seaside cottages. It is not impossible, however, that many summer cottages are now being equipped with machine-guns that will sweep every power-dory from the sea. These guns will be worked on a pivot and will equally clear the roads of unmuffled automobiles, and blow to atoms any motor-man about to sound the whistle of a trolley car.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

Misses' Wear

For misses' wear in the line of light wraps there are loose boleros and Etons in linens and very lightweight cloths that are simple, smart and practical, the preferred trimming being braid or embroidery; and such models offer just the convenience and comfort needed for wear.

W. R. Ward, of Dyersburg, Tenn., writes: "This is to certify that I have used Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup for chronic constipation, and it has proven, without a doubt, to be a thorough, practical remedy for this trouble, and it is with pleasure I offer my conscientious reference." Ed. D. Heckerman.

A Great Benefactor

If people of other countries were asked the name of the Englishman whom they hold in greatest respect that of Lord Leicester would rise spontaneously to their lips. This, at least, is literally true, that no man alive has by a single discovery conferred upon the whole of mankind a greater boon than did the surgeon who discovered the antiseptic treatment of wounds.—London Globe.

Care of Brooms

Brooms dipped for a few minutes in boiling suds once a week will last much longer than they otherwise would.

They should immediately afterward be plunged into cold water to stiffen the straw. This weekly bath is an excellent thing, for it so thoroughly cleans this dust gathering implement. If a housekeeper will take the trouble occasionally to clip the edges of the straws, the cleansing powers will be improved. This is because constant use sharpens the ends and they do not gather the dust as well as when square, their first condition.

THE PRIMER OF FORTUNE, The Why and Wherefore of Modern Phrasing for Those of Moderate Income.

Q.—How can one make money safely?

A.—Of all forms of investment none pay so well or so surely as real estate.

Q.—What kind of real estate?

A.—Industrial realty is the surest and quickest money maker.

Q.—Why is it the best?

A.—A manufacturing center grows rapidly owing to the increased demand for its products. The factories and plants enlarge in order to supply the demand, and consequently give employment to additional people—these people must have homes and this demand causes building property to become scarcer—and scarcity enhances the value.

Q.—Is there good industrial real estate for sale?

A.—Yes, and in the greatest manufacturing district on earth.

Q.—Where?

A.—In Greater Pittsburgh—the industrial mistress of the world. Ohio pays out each year over $600,000,000 in wages alone. Her banks have in capital, surplus and deposits over a half billion dollars—and showed investors have made millions of dollars in realty. In fact each day property is bought and sold at great profit.

Q.—Can you cite an instance?

A.—Thousands could be cited—one particular instance is the old cathedral property at Fifth Avenue and Grant Street. Not more than five years ago H. C. Frick bought it for $1,500,000. It is vacant and Mr. Frick has refused several offers of $3,500,000 for it. Just $2,000,000 increase in five years.

Q.—But how can a person of limited income share in this prosperity?

A.—Anyone who can save 27 to 33 cents a day can embrace the opportunity.

Q.—How?

A.—Arlington Park offers all this opportunity.

Q.—Where is Arlington Park?

A.—Arlington Park is on the main line of the P. R. R., right in the center of the greatest manufacturing district on earth. Within a two-mile radius of Arlington Park 60 per cent of the entire output of the United States Steel corporation is produced. In the same radius more men are employed than in any similar size district in the world.

Q.—Why is it a good investment?

A.—Being practically surrounded by valuable real estate it is bound to enhance in value. It adjoins Wilmerding, and this town is surrounded by hills—all the available building property in the town is in use. The town must extend into Arlington Park as it is the only property available for building purposes. Ten to 15 years ago an acre in Wilmerding was worth from $1,000 to $2,500—today a 25x100 foot lot is worth from $10,000 to $20,000—and this property is but two to six squares away from Arlington Park.

Q.—What is the price of Arlington Park lots?

A.—Arlington Park lots are one acre in size and are selling at $900 and up. Twenty-five dollars secures any lot—$5 to $25 a month pays for it; so that all have a chance to buy here.

Q.—Why is it sold so reasonable?

A.—Before we purchased it Arlington Park was a farm of 225 acres. The owners would only sell the entire farm, so that small purchasers were barred. We laid it out in acre lots and can afford to give the small investor an opportunity he could not otherwise enjoy.

Q.—Won't this opportunity last?

A.—Hardly. We are confident that every lot in Arlington Park will be sold quickly. Those who act quick will get the best lots and low prices. As soon as speculators get them they will be put up to the full selling value and no such terms as we offer will be allowed. It is a proposition that will pay the first buyer a handsome profit.

Q.—How can one learn more about Arlington Park?

A.—We have prepared a booklet telling all about it, and how to get a free trip to Pittsburgh, and it will be sent free to all who address G. M. Cypher & Co., McKeesport, Pa.

Microbes in Ink Spots

The latest scare launched against the microbe-haunted human race is the danger that lurks in ink spots and blotters upon which ink has dried. To be sure this source of infection can affect only those who are sufficiently educated to write in ink rather than in pencil, but who knows whether we shall not before long be signing Annie Brown (her mark) to an antiseptically protected epistle if this continues, rather than subject ourselves to the dangers which lurk about our hitherto unsuspected desks. It is really fortunate that telephones have done away to such an extent with social correspondence at least.

As a dear old lady said the other day, "My dear, how much nicer it was when we didn't have any germs!"

AMONG THE COTTON BLOSSOMS

Vegetables and Fruit Plentiful in the Sunny South.

Augusta, Ga., June 3, 1907.
Since writing you last I have been on the jump, making two and three towns each day. I have eaten too many peaches and cantaloupes, which made me sick, but I will be O. K. in a day or two. We have had some very cold days since I wrote you, indeed, I saw hail as large as bird's eggs. This sort of weather plays havoc with the growing cotton; while it stunts cotton much like cold nights do corn at home yet it encourages the growth of trash, as they say—we say weeds—and when the grass and weeds get a start in a cotton field it is a matter of great worry to the farmers. To make good cotton they must have hot nights and clean fields. Some of these cotton fields have as little as three hundred acres in them, while watermelon patches have from fifty to two and three hundred acres in them. Mr. Hillhouse of Waynesboro, Ga., tells me that this sized fields are not at all uncommon.

This Mr. Hillhouse is the owner and manager of a large wholesale grocery house and is a gentleman of the first water. His farm of sixteen hundred acres is half a mile from Waynesboro. He has the finest herd of Jersey cows that you ever saw; has a bull which a party from Frankford, Pa., lately offered him two thousand dollars for. He has a couple cows that under test make seven-teen pounds of fine butter per week; of course he takes the best of care of his stock. His Berkshire hogs bring what to me seem like fabulous prices and his flock of homing pigeons are a sight. He had his horse and buggy all ready to take dad out to his farm and I assure you that the few hours spent in riding over the plantation and seeing his improved stock of various kinds did me good.

Last Saturday I was in Washington, Ga. It being Saturday and the first of the month brought in the farmers from far and near and they were all accompanied by their wives and children. Well, let me tell you the streets were black with people and there was no adulteration either. One could hardly edge himself through the crowds and all were colored—not a white man on the streets. On such occasions the merchants each expect a big trade and they sell these colored people anything at all, from a needle to an elephant, at awful prices. Most, however, had meal and meat included in their purchases.

"My hair used to be very short. But after using Ayer's Hair Vigor a short time it began to grow, and now it is fourteen inches long. This seems a splendid result to me after being almost without any hair."—Mrs. J. H. FIFE, Colorado Springs, Colo.

People hereabouts are crazy over baseball and they drop the plow, the yardstick or whatever they may be doing, when it is time to see the game and I have known wholesalers to close up tight at a quarter of four so as to be on hand when the game would be called. This often knocks me out of a couple hours' work and when it happens I go sight-seeing, peering into the store windows or the yards at the beautiful flowers. Oh! the roses are so plenty and the holly hocks are a thing of beauty in this section. Vegetables and fruits of all kinds are very plentiful here. Today I saw my first watermelons for sale on the streets; I did not price them. Peaches, such as made me sick, sell four for five cents and elegant cantaloupes at ten cents each.

While here I had the pleasure of meeting my old friend, Robert Walton, Sr., now 85 and as active as I am. He and I sold many a hundred boxes of Reardon's soap in this city. He was Reardon's broker here for many years. Next week I expect to be in the turpentine districts of Florida where I can fight mosquitoes and sandflies all the time. Even now I sleep under a canopy and smear my face with oil citronella before I retire to keep them away, the pests!

The Welcome Guest
Taxes neither the nerves, pocket-book nor resources of her hostess. She is punctual—to the very minute.

She puts herself thoroughly in touch with the habits of the household.

She isn't too informal. She doesn't keep herself in evidence all of the time, but remembers to give her hostess an opportunity to attend to her household duties.

She has some consideration for the servants.

She doesn't announce on her arrival that she isn't going to be "one bit of trouble," and then proceeds to upset the household machinery through stupidity or thoughtlessness. She makes so little trouble and adds so much to the comfort and pleasure of every one that her departure is sincerely regretted.

LITTLE POCKET PHYSICIAN

Hyomei is Guaranteed by F. W. Jordan to Cure Catarrh.

Thousands who have been cured by Hy-o-mei call the inhaler that comes with every outfit the "Little Pocket Physician," as it is so small that it can be carried in the pocket or purse. There is really no excuse whatever for anyone having catarrh now that Hy-o-mei is so readily obtainable. If you have any doubt about its value, F. W. Jordan will let you have a complete outfit, with the understanding that unless it cures catarrh, it will not cost you a cent.

The complete Hy-o-mei outfit consists of the "Little Pocket Physician" and a bottle of Hy-o-mei and costs only $1.00, making it the most economical as well as the only guaranteed treatment for the cure of catarrh. Remember that Hy-o-mei cures catarrh without stomach dosing, applying the medication and healing where the disease germs are present. June 7-2t.

For Health

For the sake of general healthfulness set one or two boxes of unslaked lime in the cellar in some out of the way corner. It is an invaluable aid in drying out the cellar in the spring just after the regular cleaning.

For scratches, burns, cuts, insect bites and the many little hurts common to every family, Dr. Witt's Carbolic Witch Hazel Salve is the best remedy. It is soothing, cooling, clean and healing. Be sure you get Dr. Witt's. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, after years of backache suffering, days of misery, nights of unrest, the distress of urinary troubles, to find relief and cure?

No reason why any reader should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Toledo, Ohio, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble, but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

"The Profile"

Strange clashes, strange problems that leave a mark on the mind are depicted in Willa Sibert Cather's story, "The Profile," in the June McClure's. The scene is laid in Paris and an American artist and his wife are the principals. The artist, a portrait-painter—preferably a painter of women—fairly worshipped beauty.

When he first met the girl who afterwards became his wife, he had promised her father to paint her portrait. At the first sitting he was astounded and shocked by finding, that, though she was beautiful, one side of her face was terribly scarred. The portrait became "the profile"—whence the title of the tale. "As time went on he was drawn to her by what had once repelled him. Her courageous candor appealed to his chivalry, and he loved her, not despite the scar, but, in a manner, for its very sake."

The fate that drew them together and resulted in their marriage, slowly wove about their lives a tragedy which Miss Cather's subtle rendering wonderfully depicts. It is an unusual tale in motif, subject and treatment; the sort of literary gem that cannot be told except in the author's own language—word for word.

Piles get quick and certain relief from Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment. Its action is positive and certain. Itching, painful, protruding or blind piles disappear like magic by its use. Large nickel-capped glass jars 50 cents. Sold by all dealers.

There is no case of indigestion, no matter how irritable or how obstinate that will not be speedily relieved by the use of Kodol. The main factor in curing the stomach of any disorder is rest, and the only way to get rest is to actually digest the food for the stomach itself. Kodol will do it. It is a scientific preparation of vegetable acids containing the very same juices found in a healthy stomach. It conforms to the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

The American Magazine for June. Any one of the four things in the June American Magazine would have made the number a good one: Edwin Lefevre's character sketch of Harriman, Ellis Parker Butler's story of "Wetter New York in 1913," Ray Stannard Baker's account of "The Negro in Southern City Life," or Ida M. Tarbell's story of Grover Cleveland's great fight in 1887.

In the same number the author of "Emmy Lou" tells another Letitia story. Elizabeth Irwin writes of the most famous artists' model in the world. F. Marion Crawford goes on with his serial, and David Grayson writes of "The Tramp" in his "Adventures in Contentment" series.

Other contributors of stories and poems are: M. J. Reynolds, Witter Bynner, Walter A. Frost, Frances Bennett Dillingham, Cale Young Rice, and Walter Prichard Eaton.

"The Interpreter" talks about socialism.

Pennsylvania Railroad

Bulletin.

JUNE ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Restful, delightful, interesting, and instructive, there is no trip like that on the Great Lakes, those inland seas which form the border line between the United States and Canada. And June is one of the most charming months in the year in which to take the trip.

For comfort the fine passenger steamships of the Anchor Line have no superiors. As well-appointed as the palatial ocean greyhounds which plow the Atlantic, their schedule allows sufficient time at all stopping places to enable the traveler to see something of the great lake cities and to view in daylight the most distinctive sights of the lakes, and the scenery which frames them.

The trip through the Detroit River, and through Lake St. Clair, with its great ship canal in the middle of the lake, thence through Lake Huron, the locking of the steamer through the great locks at the Soo, and the passage of the Portage Entry across the upper end of Michigan are novel and interesting features.

The voyage from Buffalo to Duluth covers over eleven hundred miles in the five days' journey. Leaving Buffalo, the steamships Juniata and Tionesta, make stops at Erie, Cleveland, Detroit, Mackinac Island, the Soo, Marquette, Houghton and Hancock, and Duluth.

The Anchor Line is the Great Lake Annex of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the service measures up to the high standard set by the "Standard Railroad of America."

Full details of this service may be obtained from principal Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Drinks For Invalids

In nearly all feverish conditions water is now given freely. It must, however, be boiled or distilled. Never put ice in the water the patient is to drink, but cool to a refreshing temperature by laying the bottles containing it next to the ice. Milk or beer bottles with the patent corks are convenient for cooling in the refrigerator. Mineral waters—vichy, apollinaris or seltzer—are generally allowed if the patient likes them.

Egg Shells as Gas Mantles

A German patent covers the employment of egg shells as gas mantles. The two ends of the shell having been removed, it is to be supported by a gas burner, so that it may be heated to incandescence from the inside. Eggs are getting scarcer, and this may throw a little light on the subject.

All stomach troubles are quickly relieved by taking a little Kodol after each meal. Kodol goes directly to the seat of the trouble, strengthens the digestive organs, supplies the natural digestive juices and digests what you eat. It is a simple, clean, pure, harmless remedy. Don't neglect your stomach. Take a little Kodol after each meal and see how good it makes you feel. Money back if it fails. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Egg Rolls.

Sift two cups of flour with four level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a saltspoonful of salt. Rub in a level tablespoonful of lard and two level tablespoonfuls of butter. Add to the beaten yolk of one egg one cup of milk. Roll half an inch thick, cut in squares and bake in a quick oven. Serve hot.

If you will make inquiry it will be a revelation to you how many succumb to kidney or bladder troubles in one form or another. If the patient is not beyond medical aid, Foley's Kidney Cure will cure. It never disappoints. Ed. D. Heckerman.

All cough syrups containing opiates coat the bowels. Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar moves the bowels and contains no opiates.

Silver Locks

Silver hair is always a becoming and enviable possession. In old age it gives an air of softness and sweetness to the face, while in conjunction with a young skin and fresh complexion nothing can be more charming. The silver tone of the hair throws up skin and eyes to perfection, besides adding an air of distinction to an otherwise everyday type of face.

Women who up to now have been foolish enough to hide their beautiful silver tresses under an aching and hard toned hair dye are this season allowing it to be seen in all its natural beauty, this state of affairs being largely due to the fact that the tones of mulberry, claret and purple now so modish look their best when worn by a woman possessed of spotty hair.

Cured Hemorrhages of the Lungs

"Several years since my lungs were so badly affected that I had many hemorrhages," writes A. M. Ake, of Wood, Ind. "I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar, and my lungs are now as sound as a bell. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung trouble." Foley's Honey and Tar stops the cough and heals the lungs, and prevents serious results from a cold. Refuse substitutes. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Burns

For a burn or a scald take of oil of olive, three ounces; white wax two ounces; sheep suet, an ounce and a half; minium and castile soap, of each half an ounce; and camphor, three drams; make them into a salve by melting them together; anoint with oil to take out the fire; then put the plaster on; dress it every day.

Man Zan Pile Remedy comes put up in a collapsible tube with a nozzle. Easy to apply right where soreness and inflammation exists. It relieves at once blind, bleeding, itching or protruding piles. Guaranteed. Price 50c. Get it today. Sold at Irvine's Drug Store.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION

A. A. Herien, Finch, Ark., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best preparation for coughs, colds and lung trouble. I know that it has cured consumption in the first stages." You never heard of any one using Foley's Honey and Tar and not being satisfied. Ed. D. Heckerman.

One Source of News

For many years a certain New York paper received society and club gossip from a man who could not be concealed by a clever ruse. Even his checks were made out to his wife—in her maiden name. He furnished information about the doings and wrangles in various clubs; little stories involving people whose names are known by reputation to practically all readers of newspaper columns. He is said thus to have averaged an income of about ten dollars a week—not much, but enough to buy hats, gloves and canes. He was a most immaculate and apparently prosperous person. It is needless to say that he has never been suspected of this small traffic. A wealthy relative died and left him independent. When some such man furnishes the clew to a detectable scandal he has done a stroke of business that will keep him in small luxuries for months to come. —From "Newspaper Tips and Tipssters," by Whitman Bennett in The Bohemian for June

Bedford, Pa.

Dear Sir: We should like to set your boys and girls at work on this question in arithmetic and casuistry. A farmer is fattening three hogs in three small pens; they have equal room and straw and care, and are fed in these three ways: first hog, on a certain proportion of milk and cooked cornmeal; second hog, on the same, half water; third hog, on the same, half water and sawdust. How long will it take, how much will they weigh, how much will they cost, and what'll the profit be on the three?

And a similar question in pigmentry. That same farmer is going to paint three barns same size; and he says to three painters: "what'll you take to paint that barn?"

First painter scratches his head a few minutes and says: "I'll do it for $50."

Second painter: "$75."

Third painter: "$97.48."

Will they each get a barn to paint, or one get two, or one all three, or nobody any; and what'll they make on the job?

That's about how painting goes sometimes.

But there is a way to reckon. $5 a gallon. The difficulty is in knowing how many gallons to buy. There's a way out of that.

Buy the least-gallons paint, Devoe.

No matter how much one buys; he returns what's left: costs nothing.

Yours truly

F. W. DEVOE & CO.

The Fourth at Osterburg

A grand old-time celebration of the Fourth will be observed at this place this year. Osterburg, St. Clairsville and vicinity, all are very enthusiastic over the matter and the affair will far surpass any patriotic celebration ever held in northern Bedford county during past years. There will be a display of fire-works that will be far superior to any ever shown here before. A program is being arranged that will please everybody. There will be a pie-eating contest, a pig race, a sack race, climbing a greased pole, a baseball game, a shoot (a good team match is expected), fire-works in the evening.

A festival will be held during the afternoon and evening, including a chicken and waffle supper. The famous Osterburg band, which has recently equipped itself with new uniforms and the latest selections of music, will play during the afternoon and evening.—Osterburg Press.

Memorial Services Postponed

Owing to the inclement weather on Tuesday the members of Rainsburg Lodge No. 730, I. O. O. F., were compelled to postpone their memorial services until tomorrow (Saturday). At 2 o'clock p. m. members will assemble at the Lutheran church, where the graves will be decorated and then proceed to the Old Brick church to hold similar services. A cordial welcome is extended to all.
